The PADI Open Water Course is designed for the absolute beginner, and will give you a diving qualification, recognised world-wide, and will be your passport to a lifetime of adventure! Virtually anyone who is in good health, reasonably fit, and comfortable in the water can earn a PADI Open Water Diver certification. However there are occasions and conditions when diving can be strenuous, and so a Medical Declaration Form must be completed before any training can take place.

Our PADI Open Water Courses are run over two weekends and a new course starts every other week. The course is broken down into a number of modules to make learning easy and fun. To begin with, knowledge development sessions are run which cover the fundamentals of scuba diving, including dive equipment, techniques, safety aspects and planning. These sessions are supported by swimming pool dives. This prepares you for the last 2 days of the course, where in full equipment, which is now familiar; you complete your course by making four open water (ocean or lake) dives. Dates are reasonably flexible and you can switch between weekends.

Whilst you do not have to be a good swimmer, you do need water confidence. At some point in your course, your PADI Instructor will ask you to demonstrate this ability, by swimming 200 metres without swimming aids. Alternatively you can snorkel for 300 metres.

Triton Scuba provides all the equipment that you will need for training. We believe that when you buy your equipment you should have some knowledge of diving and what you want. So don't rush into it. All the equipment is provided for the course. When you do decide to invest in your own gear, we know what is good and what is not and can provide you with appropriate expert and impartial advice when making purchases.
